City Manager Marty Wine Set to Leave Tigard on Nov. 30

After nearly 9 years in Tigard, City Manager Marty Wine will be moving on from Tigard to her next local government opportunity. Since 2011, Marty has led and managed the day-to-day operations of Tigard, together with the department directors and city staff.

During that time under Marty's leadership, Tigard has accomplished a number of major milestones: 1) established its new permanent water supply, 2) improved the financial stability of the city 3) moved planning forward for light rail in Tigard, 4) established the Tigard Triangle Urban Renewal Area, 5) managed planned growth and development in the city, and 6) built strong regional relationships.

"Looking forward, Tigard's future is bright and has the benefit of a talented leadership and staff team. The Tigard community is set up for the next level of what the city will become," Wine said.

Mayor Jason Snider said that "together we have set the city on a course for Tigard's future to be strong. Marty has managed the business of the city well, and the Council and I wish her the best in her next chapter."

Marty ends her service to Tigard on November 30. The City Council will begin the search process for the next permanent city manager in the next week and identify an interim city manager to serve after Marty's departure.
